

The subject of this thesis are select practical and methodological problems with applications of artificial neural networks in forensics on the example of handwriting examination. The following issues are questioned: i) how to evaluate forensic artificial neural networks; ii) how to interpret forensic artificial neural networks; iii) how to detect forgeries created with artificial neural networks.